

AN ENCORE LEARNING SPECIAL EVENT

Pollinator Garden and Urban Bird Habitat:

Adjacent to the National Museum of Natural History

Tuesday May 2, 2017

1 to 2 PM

Pollinator Garden and Urban Bird Habitat

This event is free to Encore Learning members and limited to 20 registrants.

The Pollinator Garden features different habitats and informational signage about pollinators. All of the plants, grasses and trees in the garden were specifically selected for providing nourishment and shelter to pollinator insects. It is located on the east side of the National Museum of Natural History at 9th Street between Constitution Avenue and the National Mall in Washington, D.C.

Plant and animal diversity is a sign of a healthy ecosystem. The Urban Bird Habitat Garden is an oasis for many bird species; it provides for their basic needs: food, water, shelter, and a place to raise their young. It is located at Madison Drive.

Before the garden tours, registrants are encouraged to enjoy self-guided tours of nearby museums.

Be sure to arrive on time. We will assemble Mall side of the Pollinator Garden. A waitlist will be maintained, and all waitlist members who get into the tour will be contacted via phone or email at least one week prior to the event.

The closest metro stations are Smithsonian (blue, orange, and silver lines) and Archives-Navy Memorial-Penn Quarter (green and yellow lines). We will meet at the Mall side of the Pollinator Garden at 9th and Madison Drive NW in Washington D.C.
